Think ethnic-Asian with flavors of jazz, film, lounge and soul, and you have New Asia... A new sound from the heart of Asia, this new genre of Asian fusion is created by composer and producer, Andrew Lum, featuring the finest from all over Asia.

Amidst the delicate and seamless balance of commercially successful elements of Western music and the deep mysticism of Eastern melodies, Andrew strives to retain the character and exotic nuances of the traditional Asian instruments.

As the driving force of New Asia, Andrew has over the last 17 years worked on projects with industry names such as Ryuichi Sakamoto, Goh Hotoda, Kenny Wen, John Kaizan Neptune, Ara Malikian, the London Philharmonic, V Selvaganesh and Jorge Calandrelli.

In Asia, he has collaborated with prominent Asian artistes like Stella Zhang, Sky Wu, Tang Na, Kit Chan, Andy Lau, Dick Lee, and Sammi Cheng.

He scored the Singapore TV series AlterAsians, which won the Finalist Award in the New York Festivals and his composition New Asia, was top 10 in the World Music Category of the International Songwriting Competition. His compositions, used by the phenomenal 12-girl band Jyuni Jyoshi Gakubou, has sold over 3 million copies worldwide.
